Mental health versus mental illness: what's the difference?

While mental health and mental illness are often used synonymously, they do have different meanings. Everyone has mental health just like they have physical health, and it describes overall well-being. Mental illness is a diagnosed condition. People with a mental illness diagnosis can still have good mental health; people with no diagnosed mental illness can still have poor mental health. Either way, there are resources and support available.

What to do in times of crisis

Our mental health affects how we feel, how we think and how we act. It's important to take care of ourselves and know where to find help when we, or someone else, needs it.

Always call 9-1-1 in an emergency. If someone is a danger to themselves or others, getting the right kind of help quickly is vital.

For serious mental health concerns, there are several crisis lines available as listed below.

Access 24/7

780-424-2424

Provides 24/7 telephone support, in-person assessment, crisis outreach and patient stabilization.

Mental Health Help Line

1-877-303-2642

Provides a 24/7 confidential service that offers support, information and referrals to Albertans experiencing mental health concerns.

Suicide Crisis Helpline

9-8-8

Whether you are thinking about suicide or worried about someone else, call or text 9-8-8 toll free, any time — lines are open 24/7/365.

Distress Line

780-482-4357 (HELP)

Provides 24/7 confidential, non-judgmental and short-term crisis intervention, emotional support and resources to people in crisis or distress, as well as to family, friends and caregivers of those in crisis.

Need more crisis resources? Scan the QR code or visit www.leduc-county.com/community-family today.

Dial 211 for social resources 24/7. Have questions? Call 1-888-301-FCSS for answers.
